COUNSELLOR'S CORNER Stress and Stress Management Part 2: Coping with Stress

In part 1 we discussed that stress is the continual change that we all face in our everyday lives, and that we respond to these changes in different ways physically, emotionally and mentally.

- A goal is not to eliminate stress but to learn how to manage it, even use it to help us. Reduce your awareness of your stressors and your reactions to them. Don't ignore your problems. If you failed the first half of a course, decide what you can do to increase your chance of success next time.
- What can you change? Can you avoid or eliminate the stressors? Are you working too many hours? Is this interfering with your educational goals?
- Can you reduce the intensity of your reaction to stress? Are you making a difficult situation a disaster? The presentation is only 5 minutes in length and worth 25% of your grade.
- Can you take better care of yourself? Looking after your physical and emotional well-being? Exercise, sleep, nutritional eating and watching what you smoke and drink all add to your physical health.
- Get one cup of coffee from your morning routine.

Having mutually-supportive friendships, setting realistic rather than perfectionistic goals and being good to yourself all contribute to managing stress.

Fighting a traffic ticket is legal and easy

By David Langille

It happens to the best of us. A police officer pulls you over for speeding and gives you a ticket. But are you aware that you have the right to fight a ticket in court? You do, and it's not as hard as you think.

According to Mike Burke, a Spokane attorney who specializes in traffic law, "You can fight a ticket in court, and it's not as hard as you think."

"You have the right to fight a ticket in court," he said. "You can fight a ticket in court, and it's not as hard as you think."

Burke, who was a police officer before becoming a lawyer, said that he has never seen a person who has been arrested for a traffic ticket who has not fought the ticket.

"You can pay the fine and get your car back, but you can also fight the ticket in court," he said.

And even if you did continue to drive, he said there are still options that can be explored with the law.

"The justice of the peace can refuse the ticket based on the officer's financial interests," he said.

But many people still have to go through the process of fighting a ticket in court, and it's not as hard as you think.

"When you get a ticket, you should talk to someone that deals with traffic tickets. They will determine how to proceed with the case."

He said the justice of the peace can refuse the ticket based on the officer's financial interests.

"Speed cameras are not accurate," he said. "And the police are human, so they sometimes make mistakes with people's cars."

Although it is a person's legal right to dispute a traffic violation, or any other crime, Burke said that people usually choose to pay the fine.

"I am not the best person to drive who gets tickets," he said.

Many people, he said, may not drive the car if they have to pay the fine, so the police will be less expensive to drive than the person who is in the car.

"It was a very close call," he said. "I was driving about 100 mph in a 70 mph zone, and I was in a 100 mph zone. I was in a 100 mph zone, and I was in a 100 mph zone."

Even though some people can be caught in a trap, he said, most people will go to court to fight the ticket.

Gambling often a tragedy and not a triumph

By David Langille

As Wayne Houghton ended the winning number on his lottery ticket on May 26, 1992, he was the only person in the world to win the lottery.

The lottery ticket in his hand, which was a million years of prayer, only won him a few hundred dollars.

Houghton, a retired Canada Customs and Revenue Agency employee, has been playing the same numbers for more than 20 years.

When they won, they could hardly believe their luck.

"When I played, everybody else was in a hurry to get the ticket," he said. "I was in a hurry to get the ticket."

However, winning the lottery has not significantly affected Houghton's life.

"I was a lot of money and I was very lucky," he said. "I was very lucky, but I was not very lucky."

But gambling has changed the lives of many Canadians who play the lottery, but in the worst way.

Many people who play the lottery are addicted to the game, and they can't stop playing.

But some Canadians who play the lottery are addicted to the game, and they can't stop playing.

According to an article published in the Spokane Star, 18 percent of the population with the highest rate of unemployment are addicted to the game.

The odds of winning $1,000 a week for 10 years in a lottery ticket are about 1 in 10 million. But the chances of winning back the $1 spent on the ticket are 1 in 10.

Kids have a blast during March Break

By Kathleen Denchamps

School-age children in the Okanagan Valley are still enjoying their winter vacation, but their school year is almost over.

Everybody's work is almost done, and the kids are looking forward to the summer. School is almost over, and the kids are looking forward to the summer. School is almost over, and the kids are looking forward to the summer.

and young are having a blast at the Okanagan College's day-care centre.

"I'm not sure if they're having a blast or not, but I'm sure they're having a blast," said a parent who was watching the program.

On Monday, the children were in school uniforms, and the parents were in their own clothes.
